The Annexation Cry Is Arrant Nonsense

The interests of Mr. Hill, the Liberal candidate, J. W. Scallion, president of the Manitoba Grain Growers, dealt with the annexation cry as an insult to Canadian manhood and an insult to the Canadian people to whom a majority portion of them would turn their loyalty for any trade consideration.

He concluded: "Surely when we went to Ottawa and suggested that the preference in Great Britain be increased by fifty per cent, and that in ten years we should have free trade with Great Britain, there was no difficulty in that." "Where?"

The lines of production and consumption in the United States were rapidly coming together, Mr. Scallion continued, and in a very short time the United States would be a great importer, and there was no country better adapted to meet their trade requirements than Canada. He said that Canada never enjoyed greater prosperity than in the years following the reciprocity arrangement of 1854, and despite the fact that the same arguments were used and the same cry of annexation went up against it, reciprocity had been adopted, the annexation cry entirely disappeared. He invited a representative of the other side to show that the increasing trade of Canada was now doing with the United States had in any way affected her loyalty or was leading to annexation and disruption of the empire. (Loud cheers.)

A Corporation Lawyer.
Mr. Scallion concluded by referring to Mr. Atkins as a "corporation lawyer."

If you send Atkins to parliament the C. P. R. will go to the government for concessions and what do you suppose this gentleman will do who has fought against your claims when your stocks of hay were burned, against your claims when damage was done to your cattle, against the widow when her husband was killed. If you think that this is a man who is best qualified to serve your interests then by all means vote for him," said Mr. Scallion.

Ganey Assisting Corvick.
Part Arthur, Ont., Aug. 27.—H. R. Ganey of Toronto, Ont., arrived yesterday to commence the tour of Thunder Bay and Rainy River, speaking at important places in this section and about Kenora and Port Frances in the interests of J. J. Garlick, the Conservative candidate. Last evening he addressed a meeting at Morris, discussing reciprocity in strong terms. He predicted the Conservatives would gain 11 seats in Ontario.

Great Meeting for Corvick.
Hon. A. D. McKay, in the House of Commons, the Opposition in the provincial House, and James Corvick, Liberal candidate in Thunder Bay, and Rainy River, addressed fully three thousand persons in the Arena rink here last night.

It was one of the largest political gatherings ever assembled at the head of the lake and was taken by members of the local press. A wonderful indication that Sunny Jim's following is increasing every hour. In a wonderful address, Mr. Mackay dispensed with and for all what apprehension a certain proportion of the grain element here may have entertained regarding reciprocity. He showed that which would prove good for the rest of Canada must be good for the head of the lake, and that the government must be made it possible for Fort William and Port Arthur to be thriving cities in a few short years, would scarcely turn its back on them now.

FOUR MAGAZINE AND NEWSPAPER MEN HERE

Distinguished Writers in City for the Purpose of Securing Stories Concerning the Edmonton District.

A number of distinguished newspaper and magazine writers have paid a flying visit to Edmonton in the last day or two. A coincidence in connection with their coming was that they all arrived unheralded about the same time, called at the Board of Trade room almost simultaneously and left the city at practically the same hour, although they had never met before.

The visitors were Elliott Flower, William B. Curtis, G. D. Hooker and J. Milton State, the latter a prominent publicist man from Liverpool, England.

Mr. Flower is a Chicago writer, who has had a long association with the Chicago Record-Herald, one of the greatest newspapers in America and which has a tremendous circulation. When he is not in Washington, D.C., where he spends considerable time during sessions of Congress, Mr. Curtis travels much, making for very interesting letters as he goes along. He has been around the world several times and wherever he lands invariably finds something good to write about.

Mr. Curtis dropped into Edmonton unexpectedly. He had heard a great deal about the city and decided to see for himself. While Mr. Curtis had little to say regarding the impression he had gained in a short visit, the will all appear in the Chicago Record-Herald. It has always been his practice to cut his comment down to a minimum, preferring to let his newspaper speak for themselves.

Mr. Hooker represented the Toronto Globe, one of the best newspapers in Canada. He asked all kinds of questions about Edmonton and surrounding country, indicating that he intended to cover the ground thoroughly and in a manner that would interest the thousands of readers of the Globe. "Had I known that these men were coming I would have been glad to arrange to show them around the city," said Mr. Secretary Fisher.

"We should have at least a full day for each visitor," Secretary Fisher, however, took care of the visitors' needs and the best any one could under the circumstances.

Mr. Curtis had hardly concluded his interview with Secretary Fisher before Mr. Hooker called. The latter was also gathering data for a newspaper.

RECIPROCITY OR RESTRICTION?

J. W. Edwards, Conservative member for Frontenac, speaking in the House of Commons, January 21, 1910 (Revised Hansard P. 2228):

"But, when this government took the duty of American corn they neglected a splendid opportunity of conferring a great benefit upon the farmers of Canada in not exacting from the United States a quid pro quo that they would remove the duty from Canadian barley."

"In 1908 the United States provided us with a market for $96,900,000 of our goods, but in the same year our smaller population afforded for the people of the United States a market for $214,000,000 worth of their goods. There was thus an adverse balance of trade for Canada of $118,000,000. Hon. gentlemen opposite say that cuts no figure. But will any man in this House say that he would not prefer to have those figures reversed? Will any man say that if we were selling the United States $214,000,000 worth while they were selling us $96,900,000 worth? In 1908 we bought from the United States $1,254,704 worth of horses. And what market did they afford for our horses? They took $900,000 worth. Why was this? As I stated last session and repeat today, it is largely because our tariff discrimination against the Canadian farmer, that is, under the tariff arrangements, it is easier for the American farmer to bring stuff into Canada than for the Canadian farmer to get his stuff into the United States."

Every Conservative should vote for reciprocity.

DISAPPOINTMENT.

The Winnipeg Telegram complains strongly because President Schurman of Cornell University addressed the Winnipeg Canadian Club on the subject of reciprocity. The point serves to show how touchy the Antis are getting on the reciprocity question. Mr. Schurman was the invited guest of the Canadian Club and spoke on request. No doubt the officials of the club knew beforehand what he was going to talk about, and from what viewpoint he would discuss it. If they did not approve the subject being discussed, or being discussed from that point of view, or all they had to do was say so. Apparently they said nothing of the kind, the speech was made—and the Telegram is wrathy.

It is only a few weeks since the foremost opponent of reciprocity in Canada delivered an address in Montreal, in the course of which he urged upon Canadian Clubs their duty to plunge into the fight against reciprocity by having Opposition speakers discuss the subject at their gatherings. Did the Opposition papers rise up to reproach him. Clifford Sifton for the suggestion that Canadian Clubs from ocean to ocean should be turned into political agencies for the Opposition? Not by a long way. Where then their justification for wrath when one club allows a foremost educationalist of the continent—a Nova Scotia man by birth—to set forth to such members as choose to come and listen, the arguments in favor of freer trade?

The truth of the matter seems to be that the Opposition are a trifle disappointed in the Canadian Clubs—and correspondingly liable to be easily angered at them. When the Opposition raised the annexation cry they did so, no doubt, with the thought of lining up with themselves all the patriotic organizations in the country. If they could only stampede the Canadian Clubs and the various other societies of a patriotic or semi-patriotic nature into opposing the agreement, these would become very valuable allies in the rough-and-tumble scrimmages of an election campaign. Their own members would mean a large voting strength, and their influence might easily affect as many more votes.

The plan broke down in the beginning. The Canadian Clubs and the other societies declined to be stamped. To the disappointment of the annexation-talkers, their fuss and fury caused more amusement than alarm in the minds of cool-headed people; and people who do not individually take much stock in a cry of "wolf" are not going to divert their social and non-political societies to shooing away a danger they think to be unreal. The Canadian Clubs and the other organizations of kindred nature continue to discharge their normal functions, and to leave to His Majesty's loyal Opposition the distinction of persuading the voters that reciprocity means annexation. The Telegram's wrath is not roused because President Schurman discussed reciprocity but because he discussed it favorably.

NOT CHASING RAINBOWS.

At Harriston, Ontario, Mr. Borden told his hearers that the choice is: reciprocity with the United States versus reciprocity with the British Empire. This conveys in sufficiently plain words an impression which the opponents of reciprocity have been long trying to instill into the minds of the public but which hitherto the leader has hardly dared to so explicitly assert. Hard pressed as he is for a campaign cry, and shady as have been some of his past treatments of public questions, the admirers of Mr. Borden on both sides of the political fence will not find their estimate of his sincerity raised by this glaring attempt to trade upon the ignorance of his hearers and to stampede the electors into chasing the unattainable glories of an economic rainbow.

In putting the case this way Mr. Borden is trifling with the truth, if he is not openly denying it. The reciprocity agreement, he well knows, is not a hard and fast treaty which binds the two countries for a specified time to retain the reduced rates of tariff they agree to charge upon products passing between them. It consists merely in a coincident reduction of tariff by the two countries, acting independently of any kind and without undertaking of any kind that the duties so reduced shall not at any time be re-imposed. If at any time either country becomes persuaded that the agreement is not in its interests, the parliament of that country is entirely free to raise the duties to their old height or any other height thought proper or advantageous—and that without consulting the other country or giving notice other than that required by common international courtesy. In no way can the acceptance of the agreement bind the Canadian Parliament to not re-impose the duties so reduced or abolished, if at any time it should become necessary to do so in order to negotiate or accept preferential tariff treatment from the Old Country and the other British Dominions.

Mr. Borden knows this as well as any man; and in giving utterance to a statement whose plainest meaning is a negation of this known fact he is either openly defying the known truth or is dealing in language of double meaning. In either event his sincerity gains nothing by the venture.

It was plainly Mr. Borden's desire to make his hearers think that if they wanted preferential treatment in the British markets all they had to do was to vote down reciprocity on the 21st of September. Is that true? What foundation is there for it? What is the tendency of thought in Great Britain—in favor of a food tax for the benefit of the farmers of Canada and other British Dominions, or away from that notion? Surely the most enthusiastic protectionists cannot but see in the course of events there that the British people have irrevocably decided that their food remains free. It is not so many years since a Unionist Government in Great Britain put an import tax upon wheat. Was the wheat of Canada and the other British Dominions exempt from the tax? Not a bit of it. Yet Mr. Borden left the people of Harriston to understand that what the Marquis of Salisbury dare not do, even as a temporary measure, is likely to be done as a measure permanent and calculated policy. Two general elections occurred in Great Britain after the war in each of which the way prevent Canada accepting the handle Unionists put forward prominently the proposal for so-called "tariff reform." With what result? Again, when the third election came around, Mr. Balfour declined to take the issue with the food-tax charge against him. On the eve of the election he announced that a vote for him would not mean a vote for what is called "tariff reform," but that this matter would be submitted to the people directly for a pronouncement by plebiscite. Was the result such as to lend ground for the belief that tariff reform had made any substantial headway among the masses of the Old Land? Hardly.

The talk of the British people putting a tax on themselves to make Canadians and other over-sea Britishers happy is so much humbug and may as well be put down at that first as last. When hens grow teeth there may be a tax against food entering Great Britain; not before. Britishers may be decaying—as some of them tell us—or they may not yet; but in any event they have not yet approached the stage of economic imbecility which would make them increase their own cost of living for the benefit of somebody else—especially a somebody who does not need the sacrifice and who would be equally amused and amazed at their making it. Should they ever reach that stage the reciprocity agreement with the United States will not in any way prevent Canada accepting the handle of the jug thus accommodatingly held out to her. But we have too high an estimate of British common sense to expect the effort to be made this side the millennium. Canadians are not turning down business prospects these days for the fun of chasing rainbows.

THE SWING OF VICTORY.

At Nanapine, Mr. Charles Anderson, a prominent Conservative farmer, stated that reciprocity was of far more importance to Canadian farmers than abject party allegiance. He declared he was not a traitor to his party, but that the party was a traitor to the old policy for which Sir John Macdonald and all other Conservative leaders had stood to the time it became possible through the Fielding-Taft agreement.

At Brockville, Mr. John Giff, President and General Manager of one of the large hardware and edged-tool manufacturers in eastern Ontario, said that the reciprocity agreement "is purely a sound business one, and Canadians will do well to avail themselves of its advantages altogether apart from politics. I am glad, as a manufacturer, to have this opportunity of heartily approving of the sound business-like agreement secured by Mr. Fielding."

RIFLEMAN'S OPINION.

Prominent Marksmen Say That Low Position at Bisley Has Come to Stay.
Ottawa, Aug. 27.—Col. John Harlow of the British National Rifle Association, arrived at the D.R.A. range, this morning. He is an old friend of the Canadian association and came from England nearly every year to attend the matches here. "I think that the low position has come in Bisley," he said. "It has been adopted as within the rules at Bisley and I think it is here to stay. Personally I would favor making the competitors keep the rifle free from the ground but the war office says 'allow anything' and it will have to go."

25 MILLION DOLLAR FIRE

With Cry of Fire There Is Mad Rush For Exit

Canmore, Pa., Aug. 26.—A moving picture film exploding last night in the Morgan opera house, caused a panic, in the north, and the doors and exits were made and before the theatre was empty twenty-five lives had been sacrificed and twenty were injured. Immediately following the flash of the film, a loud shout of "Fire" was heard from the city and in a moment there was a rushing, screaming, stampede of humanity, ten feet high, in the narrow hallway leading to the entrance of the theatre.

Most of the dead were smothered. In the mad rush for the exits people were thrown from their feet and trampled upon. Others were thrown upon them, and others the bottom of this human pile were suffocated. The victims mostly were women and children.

When two volunteer fire departments rushed to the theatre, the scene was a chaotic one. The audience who had managed to get out of the building and other spectators drawn to the scene were rushing about the front of the building. No one knew it seemed was making any effort to aid the struggling mass within the theatre. The firemen pushed into the hall and practically three persons in the street. At the same time, the firemen ran wildly about, shrieking in terror. As the firemen heard the bottom of the pile, they began to lift out the unconscious forms of the injured and later came out.

The dead were laid tenderly in a row along the sidewalk. Relatives fought and struggled to get to the stricken and reach the victims. The disaster came with such suddenness that stunned the people of Canmore and the surrounding districts in a dated condition, seemingly in a daze. The terror and grief for the loss of loved ones was intense.

The Morgan opera house is in the centre of the town. It is a large structure with two galleries, which, with the main floor, afforded seating capacity for 1,000 persons. The house was packed to the limit of the explosion. Not only were all the seats filled, but hundreds were standing in the rear of the ground floor. The moving picture show was on at the time of the disaster. It was there that the explosion occurred. It made a loud noise and immediately a fire went up from the audience.

The spectators on the main floor and the first gallery heard the cry and all ran in mass and started for the exits. The firemen rushed to the second gallery brought a second alarm to the first balcony and a second alarm led to the main entrance. The rush of both galleries to the main entrance was so intense that the crowd choked instantly with a mass of humanity.

Other people crowded with fear, pressed the fire and ran to the street in safety. But those that had made for the main entrance met a terrible fate. As they rushed to the entrance, they were stopped in their progress by a mass of people trying to force their way into the theatre at the same time. The latter saw the crowd and the fire and were trying to get in for the second performance, which was to begin in a few minutes.

Shouts from the confused and struggling mass of people were heard for a great distance from the opera house. The cry of "fire" caused an alarm to be turned on and the firemen came, but they were almost helpless. Greatly it is to be regretted that there was no fire in the building, but the stampede had done its work. The film booth was fire-proof and the fire went no further than its interior.

John McCullough, operator for the moving picture machine had just turned the side of the next series of pictures on the screen entitled "The Girl Shall Lead Them." When the film exploded and exploded the machine was filled with flames. For a few moments the audience, smothering under a mass of people, were in the fact and the operator heroically fought down the flames and succeeded in extinguishing them.

Then with his hands fearfully burnt and almost exhausted, he opened the door of the little box and staggered out. With the opening of the door a dense cloud of smoke poured into the audience. The public followed.

Half of the dead are children less than fifteen years of age. Eight are women. Five are grown men. Six are infants or small children. The body of Dubrovnik, the husband, whose fall started the flight to escape from the theatre caused the death of more than ten was found at the bottom of the pile. Dead bodies were found in all parts of the hall. The bodies of people waiting for the film were found in the aisles. So great was his strength that he raised himself to his knees under the struggling mass and he was crushed down again as if he had been no more than a child. He was found on the weight on top of him. And on came the panic mad crowd, piling higher and higher until the roof was crushed to death. The enormous pile was crushed to death at the bottom of the pile.

Half Dead Are Children. Of the 25 dead, 13 were children. Arthur McKee, whose name was among the dead, was standing in the building when the bodies began to pile up at the door. The young man McKee, the rescue and was in the act of dragging a body from the pile when a mass of bodies falling down upon him. He was killed. McKee was on the back and the young man's neck was broken.

A HORRIBLE FEELING

The Excavation on Adjoining Lot Weakens the Foundations.

Warned by cracking timbers and falling plaster, J. A. Pinckney, of 411 Nanaimo, rushed out of his building yesterday afternoon to find that with his foundations undermined by an adjoining excavation it had begun to settle in a most menacing fashion. Although the police, who were apprised of the danger almost immediately, could do very little to save the building, they were successful in getting around the dangerous point to prevent an over-crowded public from visiting. Too far, building inspector Pinckney was at once summoned and went over the building to examine it and to direct what he deemed to be the best method of saving it. He stated, however, that he was unable to propose anything to prevent the settling of the wall from eventually taking place.

Two Storey Structure. The building is a two storey structure of brick veneer owned by E. M. Lee of Pinckney and occupied by J. A. Pinckney's store, the Household Hardware, and the Nanaimo Market, a branch of the Pacific Canadian Co., managed by W. A. McLeod. Three weeks ago excavation was started for a building on the lot adjoining on the north. When the excavation had reached a point on the same level as that of the structure that was standing, the wall was in danger of settling.

RECIPROCITY WILL RAISE THE PRICE OF HORSES

and that I could ship horses of the best class to Spokane and Seattle and get more for them than in Western Canada markets.

In the price of farm horses, there is very little difference in the market in the United States.

It is true there are in Montana a few large bunches of wild horses. But under present regulations, no horse can be taken from the range in Canada at all, and I rather think that regulation will remain in force.

There will, however, be a non-descript class, neither farm horses nor drivers, and would not bring a high price anywhere.

As for their admission to Canada raising the price of good horses, that is impossible.

Mr. McLean reports cutting prices general now in the southern portion of the province, and says that in ten days or two weeks all the grain will be ready for the blinder.

WAS THROWN FROM TRAIN. Conductors on Special are Assailed by Montreal, Aug. 27.—Conductor Paul Munroe, who was in charge of the special train which was striking back at the Labor trouble, was thrown from his train last night.

Munroe was assaulted following a few minutes' delay in the morning. The train had been stopped at the Victoria bridge and was travelling about 25 miles an hour.

He was thrown from the train by a crowd of men who were on the bridge. The train was stopped for some time.
